How Can Your Protection Your Family And Yourself From Fire?

Fire Prevention Week 1990 Focuses On Positive Steps We All Can Take

Each year roughly 10 percent of all fire fatalities in the United States occur in homes. In fact, nearly 5,000 people died in home fires in this country in 1988, according to the latest fire loss report published by the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA).

"We are dying in fires that occur in the places we feel safest," says NFPA President Robert W. Grant. "We need to look around these familiar surroundings and see the dangers that lurk there. We can protect ourselves if we identify and remove home fire hazards before they start a fire."

This year's Fire Prevention Week theme is, "Make Your Place Firesafe: Hunt for Home Hazards." We hope it will be an inspiration to the young and old, and the rich and the poor, to lower the risk of having a fire in their homes.

This year Fire Prevention Week will fall during the week of October 7-13. It is sponsored every year by the NFPA to focus attention on the need for fire prevention education. Fire Prevention Week was first proclaimed by President Warren G. Harding in 1922 to commemorate the Great Chicago Fire of 1871. The Chicago fire killed 250 people, left 100,000 homeless and destroyed more than 17,400 buildings.

To encourage participation by young people, the NFPA sponsors a poster contest each year for children in grades Kindergarten through 8 who illustrate the current theme. (For details about the contest, please contact the NFPA Public Education Department at 617-984-7280.)

What can you do to protect yourself and your family from a home fire? Plan a family walk-through of your home, making sure everyone knows what to do in case of fire and what kind of dangers to look for. Go on your own "hunt for home hazards." Here's a sample checklist:

Keep Smoke Detectors Maintained

Do you have a smoke detector for every level of your home and each sleeping area? Is each smoke detector installed properly? Are the batteries fresh? Does every member of the family know what the alarm sounds like (especially with bedroom doors closed) and what to do if they hear it? Teach your family to respond quickly to the sound of the detector alarm. Having a smoke detector in your home cuts your risk of dying in a home fire in half. Test your detector at least once a week and replace the batteries at least once a year. Remember: smoke detectors with dead or missing batteries can't save your life.

Keep Exits Clear

Are all exits unobstructed? Check to see that all doors and at least one window in each room are not blocked by furniture, toys, etc. Be sure windows open easily, and avoid burglar bars, double cylinder locks, and any other security measure that could trap you inside a burning home. Everyone should know at least two ways out of each room, so your hunt for home hazards is also a good time to plan your new home fire drill. Remember: blocked exits are home fire hazards.

Careless Smoking Can Kill

Your hunt for home hazards should include a close evaluation of family members who smoke. Do you see burn marks on furniture or carpets? Does the smoker in your family use an ashtray that always seems to be filled with cigarette butts? Does he or she smoke in bed? Smoking materials are the leading cause of home fire deaths, and careless smokers present a danger to all members of the household, not just themselves. Smokers should use extreme caution when smoking and use large, heavy ashtrays to extinguish smoking materials. Never smoke in bed or when sleepy. Remember: careless smoking is the primary cause of home fire deaths.

Heat Your Home Safely

Check your heating equipment. Look for trash or stored materials near your furnace or water heater and remove them. Have your furnace cleaned and inspected by a professional once a year. Be sure chimneys are cleaned and inspected at least once a year. Be especially careful if you have space heaters or portable heaters of any kind; make sure they are turned off before leaving the room or turning in for the evening; use the right fuel for a portable kerosene heater and never fill it if it's hot or in an unventilated area. Make sure all your heating appliances are a safe distance—at least three feet—from furniture, bedding, walls, anything that can burn. Remember heating equipment is the number one cause of home fires in the U.S.

Hunt for Electrical Hazards

Look for these danger signs: overloaded electrical outlets, fuses of improper size, cracked or frayed cords, cords run across traffic areas, under carpets and furniture, or pinned tightly to a wall by furniture. Make sure your family is using electricity wisely. Heavy appliances, such as air conditioners, should have their own heavy-duty electrical circuits, don't plug more than one appliance into an extension cord, replace worn cords; and seek help from an electrician if you are unsure what load the circuits in your home are designed for. Keep flashlights handy in case of a power failure-don't use candles for emergency lighting. Remember unsafe use of electricity is a home fire hazard.

Store Matches and Lighters Out of Children's Reach

Where do you keep your fire tools? Make sure matches and lighters are stored out of sight and out of reach of young children. Teach children that matches and lighters in the hands of children are critical home fire hazards.

Keep Your Kitchen Firesafe

Look around the kitchen: do you see a stove loaded with cooking utensils? Spilled food or grease buildup on the stove or in the oven? pot handles turned out? small appliances left plugged in? Kitchen firesafety starts with the cook! Wear short or close-fitting sleeves when cooking, because loose clothing can be ignited. Never leave your cooking unattended and always keep pot handles turned in so they can't be pulled or knocked off the stove. Don't store items on the stove top or over it. Keep appliances unplugged when not in use and keep them clean and dry. Make sure everyone knows how to handle a small grease fire, smother the flames by sliding a lid or larger pan over the fire and turn off the burner, never pour water on a grease fire. Remember: unattended cooking is a home fire hazard.

Watch Out for Flammable Liquids

Don't forget to hunt for home fire hazards in the garage, basement and attic. Are you storing combustible or flammable liquids in tight, labelled metal containers, away from heat or flame. Never store gasoline in your home, keep on hand only the quantity you need to fuel your lawn mower or similar equipment and be sure it is stored in an approved safety can with a spring closure valve, vapor vent, and pour spout. Remember: combustible and flammable liquids are home fire hazards.

Additional Steps You Can Take

Consider installing an automatic residential sprinkler system in your home. Consider buying fire extinguishers and make sure everyone in the family knows how and when to use them. When purchasing furniture, select fire retardant pieces, and when purchasing electrical appliances, select those that have been labeled and approved by an independent testing laboratory. Remember: you CAN take steps to protect yourself from a home fire.

"The vast majority of home fire fatalities could be prevented by changing risky behaviors and identifying and removing home fire hazards," says Mr. Grant. "A hunt for home hazards is a great start to making your place firesafe!"

Established in 1896, the NFPA is an international, non-profit, voluntary membership association with more than 53,000 members worldwide. Publisher of the National Fire Codes and the Learn Not to Burn public firesafety education program, the NFPA also prepares many statistical reports on fire prevention and protection. NFPA headquarters is in Quincy, Mass.

Theme for Fire Prevention Week 1990:

Making Your Place Firesafe: Hunt For Home Hazards. October 7-13, 1990

Officially kicking off the campaign for Fire Prevention Week, Todd Cook urged the public to participate in firesafety education programs and a community wide commitment to firesafety.

Fire Prevention Week (October 7-13 this year) is commemorated each year to highlight the value of firesafety education. Fire Prevention Week was first proclaimed by President Warren G. Harding in 1922 to commemorate the Great Chicago Fire of 1871. The Chicago fire killed 250 people, left 100,000 homeless and destroyed more than 17,400 buildings. The Citizens Hose Co. Fire Department is sponsoring Fire Prevention Week with the support of the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) and schools and civic organizations across the U.S. and in Canada.

It is your home a safe haven from fire? It may not be, if you haven't gone on a hunt for home hazards lately. According to Todd Cook of the Citizens Hose Company, over 5,000 people in the United States died in fires in their homes in 1988 (the latest year for which statistics are available), and the majority of those fire deaths could have been prevented by changing risky behaviors and identifying and removing home fire hazards.

"With about 80 percent of all fire deaths in this country occurring in our homes this year's Fire Prevention Week message is right on the mark," Todd Cook says. "The theme, 'Make Your Place Firesafe: Hunt for Home Hazards,' underscores the important role we each have in reducing our risk of having a home fire by pointing out that there are steps we all can take to make our homes firesafe. The first step is going on a hunt for home fire hazards."
